

Laden may be hiding in Pak: Pakistan conceded on Monday that Osama bin Laden may be hiding in its rugged tribal belt bordering Afghanistan. The Laden's presence anywhere in that area cannot be ruled out, foreign ministry spokesman Masood Khan said. He was responding to a statement by the US ambassador to Pakistan, Nancy Powell, in this regard last week.

Kelly felt 'betrayed', says his widow

London: The widow of British weapons scientist David Kelly said on Monday that her husband felt "betrayed" when the defence ministry revealed him as the source of allegations that Prime Minister Tony Blair's government exaggerated the threat of Saddam Hussein's Iraq. "He said several times over coffee and lunch, over afternoon tea, that he felt totally let down and betrayed," Jamie Kelly told the judicial inquiry into the apparent suicide in July of the former UN arms inspector. Of the defence ministry officials who leaked his name, Mrs Kelly said: "They were the ones that effectively let his name be known in the public domain. He was extremely up of 'tavern' conversation via video link from a separate room inside the Royal Court of Justice in central London. Mrs Kelly, 36, told mother Lord Brenda Butler that her husband of 35 years, was a "bookish" and "debarred" to his job as an expert on weapons of mass destruction, particularly on Iraq.

A car that runs on water too

By Maurice Chatterton

London: What is the future of the car? It is a question that has been asked many times over the years. But now, with the advent of a car that can run on water, the question is being asked again.

With a car that can run on water, the future of the car is being redefined. The car is not just a means of transport, but a symbol of innovation and progress.

The car is a symbol of innovation and progress. It is a car that can run on water, and it is a car that is being developed by a team of scientists and engineers.
